

The History of Five-Star Basketball

Since 1966, no organization has had a greater impact on the sport of basketball than Five-Star Basketball. Five-Star has more graduates playing college or pro ball than any other organization.

Five-Star is very proud of the opportunity to work with all players in China and help raise their game to its highest level. Tens of thousands of Five-Star participants have gone on to play basketball in college and beyond.

Five-Star Basketball in China

Five-Star Basketball China has already organized two camps in Beijing, with the help of Dulwich College (2008 October holidays and 2009 Chinese New Year), and one training camp in Shanghai (23-27 March) at the Shanghai American School. Besides this, in conjunction with the Beijing 2009 Beijing Camp we organized a clinic for coaches and PE teachers, with 30 participants.

Since last March Five-Star Basketball is running its spring programs in Beijing with the participation of 48 basketball player from different international schools, in cooperation with Sports Beijing, the Canadian International School of Beijing and the International School of Beijing.

Through our partnership with Five-Star in the United States we are able to bring coaches to China who have extensive experience in the Five-Star training camps in the States. Shay Berry, Jason Hasson, James Cromwell and Tommy Verdell have provided players with “basketball resources” to improve their basketball skills, and at the same time organized practices focused on individual and team play development.

Five-Star Basketball China brings the experience and expertise of Five-Star to the Chinese market. We hope to increase the skill development of young players in China and provide a route to playing college level basketball in the United States.
